

Cuam University Foundation is a foundation that unites universities of Africa, the Mediterranean and the 47 countries of the "Bologna Process".

The CUAM is based on the principle of the Consortium of Universities, in which each partner takes an active part, in education and science, according to their specificity.

The Consortium operates in the field through academic and administrative fees by the cooperation framework and the respective accession protocols, which govern the management and operation.

CUAM University seeks to reach certain aims and objectives for the public interest by pursuing non-profit organization.

It conducts basic and applied research and publicizes the results by way of teaching, publication and technology transfer.

Scientific Promoter
Seconda Università degli Studi di Napoli

CUAM UNIVERSITY FOUNDATION

Via Roberto Ruffilli, 36
82100 Benevento - Italia

Fax 0230132531/0824312108

www.cuam.eu

info@cuam.eu

C.F. 92066030625

Cuam University Foundation

www.cuam.eu

Cuam University Foundation

It is a university consortium which aims to promote the cooperation in education, training and in scientific and technological research.

The scientific promoter is second University of Naples, which is the advisory body, supervision and guidance for all scientific activities, educational and cultural activities carried out by the Foundation.

The CUAM today has 80 universities from 40 different countries and it wants to be a center with cultural purposes and a network of public service, non-profit

Cuam University will:

- promote and develop education, training and applied research for the euro-African-Mediterranean zone;
- act as a center for the promotion and coordination of research and innovation and reinforce the skills and cultural and technological resources, aimed at improving the quality of life in the African-Mediterranean zone;
- develop a collaboration with businesses operating in the Afro-Mediterranean, through projects aimed, in the context of the initiatives and of the national and EU regulations;
- support the development of vocations and land resources, structural and human resources of the zones involved;
- create and manage structures and services connected directly or indirectly with university activities.

Cuam University Press Editions Labrys represents the channel's editorial of CUAM University Foundation.

The publishing house publishes the results of scientific research conducted at national and international levels, to spread them in the circuit of academic communication of CUAM. University Press Editions Labrys intends, therefore, to represent a reference point within the international publishers, ensuring quality of academic level and a widespread distribution of its products at the international level.

Join the consortium

The public and private universities can join by signing and submitting the protocol agreement, by mail at presidenza@cuam.eu, or by fax to the number +390230132531.

Membership is subject to evaluation by the Presidential Council and other delegated organs.